Neuberger Elected by Narrow Margin

Democrats Take Over Senate With Hairline Oregon Victory

WASHINGTON (CP)—A hairline victory by Democrat Richard Neuberger over Senator Guy Cordon, decided more than 24 hours after the polls closed, apparently gave the Democrats control of the Senate in Tuesday's off-year election.

Recounts may affect the result both in Oregon and in New Jersey, where Republican Clifford Case had a slim margin over Democrat Charles Howell, but the Democrats had a 48-to-47 edge pending the result of the recounts. The remaining Senate seat is held by another Oregon senator, Independent Wayne Morse, who pledged his vote to the Democrats.

The Democrats already have won control of the House of Representatives by a 29-seat margin despite President Eisenhower's pre-election plea to leave Congress in friendly Republican hands. And they had taken eight state governorships formerly held by Republicans.

Both the New Jersey and Oregon races were tight right up to the finish.

Case, who had battled the right wing of his party almost as much as his Democratic opponents during a hectic campaign, was a bare 2,000 votes ahead when all the votes were counted. Pending the results of a recount, his seat was safe in the Republican column.

DIFFERENT STORY

In Oregon it was a different story. Democrat Richard Neuberger, an author whose articles on northwestern Canada have been published widely throughout the United States, finished strongly and took a narrow lead of barely 1,000 votes with only a few precincts left to report.

Neuberger's great personal victory in 1952 did not extend to his party. It went into this election with only a one-member majority in each chamber of Congress.

The president at once announced that he would consult with House leaders of both parties and he gave the impression that he would hope for and expect to receive co-operation in important issues.

Democratic leaders in the campaign said co-operation would be given—in fact they argued that Eisenhower needed a Democratic Congress to help carry out his program in the remaining two years of his term.

Former president Harry Truman in Independence, Mo., rejoined in the Democratic House gains and named former Illinois Adlai Stevenson as his choice for Democratic presidential candidate in 1956.

At Libertyville, Ill., Stevenson, who lost the presidential race to Eisenhower in 1952, was cautious in his comment.

"I am grateful to former president Truman," he said, "but I have no present plans for future political activity."

'Too Precious To Be Taken for Granted'

Queen Mother Stresses Value Of Firm Bond Linking U.S.-U.K.

Tolerance, Patience Theme of Address

NEW YORK (CP)—Queen Mother Elizabeth, symbol of British-American friendship, at the close of her visit to New York said Wednesday night the Atlantic, "once a wide gulf between us, is surely now a lake that links us."

An audience of more than 3,000 at a farewell dinner given by the English-Speaking Union—one of the biggest in the history of the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel—heard the Queen Mother caution that the understanding "which I believe to be so necessary between our two countries, is much too precious to be taken for granted."

"For misunderstanding are like weeds; neglect to tend your garden and they spring up everywhere. True understanding by contrast needs constant fostering. It needs tolerance as well as firmness, patience as well as goodwill, common sense as well as good intentions, hard heads as well as warm hearts."

Speaking for the Americans, Earl Warren, chief justice of the United States, said that today the dream of peace in the world has begun "in approximate reality," and "one of the compelling reasons why this is so has been the way the British Commonwealth and the United States have moved forward together."

CANADA LINK

The theme of friendship between the two great powers—Canada a significant link between them—was carried through the audience, made up of prominent British, American and Canadian figures plus United Nations delegates.

Ray Lawson, Canadian consul-general in New York, was his country's official representative at the dinner—but seven Canadian pilots of the Black Watch regiment shared the limelight with the Queen Mother before the glittering guests.

ONLY MAJOR SPEECH

The Queen's speech was the only major one of her three-week tour of New York, Washington and Ottawa. She thanked the English-Speaking Union, an organization dedicated to better understanding between the U.S. and Britain, for the contributions made to the King George VI memorial fund by which scholarships are granted to English students for specialized work in the U.S.

The dinner wound up the Queen Mother's visit to New York which began October 24. Today she takes off for Washington to visit the White House as guest of President Eisenhower, and next Friday flies to Canada for a six-day stay in the Ottawa area before returning to New York to sail for home.

The City of New York marked the visit earlier Wednesday with a luncheon tendered by Mayor Robert Wagner. The Queen told the mayor and guests that her stay here was "certainly an inspiring and stimulating experience."

Since New York's administration is Democratic, there were many happily victorious Democratic leaders and supporters at the lunch, and the Queen Mother chatted briefly with Averell Harriman, governor-elect of New York State.

POLITICS AVOIDED

But like Mayor Wagner, Democratic mayor of the city, Harriman carefully avoided the subject of politics in talking to the Queen Mother.

Miss Margaret Truman, daughter of the former president; Dag Hammarskjöld, secretary-general of the United Nations; Ralph Bunche, Negro director of trusteeship affairs at the UN and Bernard Baruch, American elder statesman, were among guests at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel for the lunch.

In a brief speech after lunch, the Queen Mother said: "A visit to New York is certainly an inspiring and stimulating experience. No one can fail to be impressed by the beauty of your great city and

Vow To Forget Color Bars

Fresh Start Only Answer Say Barred Bride, Teacher

VANCOUVER (CP)—John Hewitt brought his pretty Jamaican bride back to British Columbia Wednesday night vowing to forget about color bars and make a fresh start.

The couple, who arrived here by air from Toronto, said under no circumstances would they return to the exclusive Shawnigan Lake School where the bride was turned away because of her color.

"We feel a new start is definitely in order," the 34-year-old, English-born science teacher told newspaper reporters at a press interview held immediately after the couple's arrival. He added that his wife, Dorothy, would not have considered returning to Canada with him had he contemplated returning to the school.

"We feel we've come home," he added.

Mrs. Hewitt, who left the school and returned alone to her home only four days after her marriage, looked like a bride on her honeymoon as she stepped from a Trans-Canada Airlines plane carrying a huge bouquet of flowers and wearing a chic, form-fitting grey tweed suit.

More than a score of newspaper reporters, radio men and photographers met the Hewitts as they left the plane. Also on hand were a few personal friends and a group of about 15 men and women who identified themselves as members of the left-wing League for Democratic Rights.

TACTFULLY DECLINES

Mrs. Hewitt tactfully, but firmly, declined to take a bouquet one member of the group attempted to hand her, using the bouquet of carnations and roses she was already carrying as an excuse.

The school teacher said that many Jamaicans who planned to emigrate to Canada have now changed their minds.

Mrs. Hewitt, who flew to Jamaica a week ago to rejoin his wife, said he hoped he would be able to resume his teaching career in a Vancouver public school. He said he has filed his qualifications with both the public school board here and the B.C. Teachers' Federation.

Mr. Hewitt said the school had paid his fare to Jamaica although he had advised the headmaster, G. Peter Kaye, there was little likelihood he or his wife would sign a statement prepared by the headmaster which read in part, "I appreciate the fact that

Gang Victim Shot

VANCOUVER (CP)—The shooting of William Semenick in heavily-timbered Stanley Park during the early morning, was the second attempt on the ex-convict's life, police said Wednesday night.

Semenick, with a bullet wound in the left groin, was in good condition under guard in hospital here but police said the fact he suffered with a heart condition created a "potentially dangerous" situation.

GANG RIVALRY

It was the second gangland-style shooting in Vancouver within two months. Last September Danny Brent, head waiter at a liquor club here, was slain after being driven to a suburban golf course.

Brent and Semenick were reported to have been good friends.

The chance arrival of a police officer, who mistook the rapid-fire drumming of an automatic for children shooting off firecrackers, was credited with saving Semenick's life Wednesday night.

Const. Bill Lindsay was on a routine patrol of the 1,000-acre park in a one-man police jeep when he heard the sound of the explosions and Semenick staggered toward him.

"Help me, I'm shot," Lindsay quoted the injured man.

At the same time, a nearby car sped away and another man raced into the bushes afoot.

A 26-year-old man, found hiding in the waters of Burrard Inlet, immersed up to his neck, was taken into custody. He was seen by a caretaker as he lowered himself into the water behind a cabin cruiser. A second man was arrested later in the day, but no charges were laid.

Semenick worked at different times as a roof shingler in Toronto, Winnipeg, Victoria and Vancouver.

Convicted In Whisky Slaying

VANCOUVER (CP)—Peter Vauchel, 27-year-old unemployed logger charged with murder, was convicted Wednesday on a reduced charge of manslaughter in the butcher-knife slaying of German immigrant Karl Horywald.

The knifing took place in Vauchel's room after a drinking party in a downtown club. A dispute over ownership of a bottle of whisky preceded the fatal fracas.

Fire Rages In Duncan

Fine Old Titles Go on Auction Block

LONDON (Reuters)—A batch of 27 fine old titles went on the auction block Wednesday, and England managed to hang on to all but one of them.

An expected buying spree by title-hungry Americans failed to materialize. Apparently they were discouraged by the news that they could not export the musty documents proving them to be lords of the manors.

After the last title was auctioned off in the glare of newsreel and television lights, the 27 successful bidders had paid more than $10,000 for the right to put on their calling cards such monickers as "John Doe, lord of the manor of Circum Cum Wilcocks alias Fransham Parva in the parish of Little Fransham." That item sold for $925.

One Chicago woman, Mrs. Verne E. Oleck, sent the auctioneer a cheque for $100 as a deposit on one of the titles. But she mistakenly believed that a manor house was included with the title.

Before the bidding began Wednesday, the auctioneer announced that none of the documents—some of them 700 years old—could be taken out of England.

One title was bought for an Australian couple, Maj. Gordon Dunstan and his wife. The major now is lord of the manor of Beaumont in Lindsey, which belonged to the Beaumont family in 1291.

Costly Watch Disappears

Time has flown for Robert Rooney, 1744 Klaser, who told police yesterday that he lost a $125 wrist watch near the post office.

campaign in the last week. It would now appear likely that Eisenhower, whether or not he wants it, will take the presidential nomination in 1956 for a second term.

DEMOCRATIC VICTORY
If the result of Tuesday's confusion is a victory for any party it must go to the Democrats. They improved the party's position in the matter of state governorships and won the House cleanly.

Eisenhower's great personal victory in 1952 did not extend to his party. It went into this election with only a one-member majority in each chamber of Congress.

The president at once announced that he would consult with House leaders of both parties and he gave the impression that he would hope for and expect to receive co-operation in important issues.

Chinese To Pay Claim

LONDON (CP)—Red China has agreed to meet Britain's demand for £367,000 in damages for the British airliner shot down by Chinese Communist fighters July 23 near Hainan Island with the loss of 10 lives.

Robert Hugh Turton, parliamentary undersecretary for foreign affairs, told the House of Commons that Peiping has "accepted this claim as covering the entire benefits and compensation for all losses involved."

Ten persons lost their lives in the incident, described at the time by Foreign Secretary Eden as "a savage and inexcusable attack on an unarmed passenger aircraft."

An American amphibious aircraft landed on a rough sea and picked up eight survivors before the airliner, which was on its way from Singapore to Hong Kong, sank.

Turton said the British government had noted assurances given by the Chinese vice-minister for foreign affairs that measures have been taken to prevent the recurrence of such incidents.

New Start Slated By Bride, Teacher

VANCOUVER (CP)—John Hewitt brought his pretty Jamaican bride back to British Columbia Wednesday night vowing to forget about color bars and make a fresh start.

The couple, who arrived here by air from Toronto, said under no circumstances would they return to the exclusive Shawinigan Lake School where the bride was turned away because of her color.

"We feel a new start is definitely in order," the 34-year-old, English-born science teacher told newspaper reporters at a press interview held immediately after the couple's arrival. He added that his wife, Dorothy, would not have considered returning to Canada with him had he contemplated returning to the school.

The school teacher said that many Jamaicans who planned to emigrate to Canada have now changed their minds.

Mrs. Hewitt, who flew to Jamaica a week ago to join her wife, said he hoped he would be able to resume his teaching career in a Vancouver public school. He said he has filed his qualifications with both the public school board here and the B.C. Teachers' Federation.

Mr. Hewitt said the school had paid his fare to Jamaica although he had advised the headmaster, G. Peter Kaye, there was little likelihood he or his wife would sign a statement prepared by the headmaster which read in part:

"I appreciate the fact that the various remarks and actions attributed to the school authorities throughout this unfortunate dispute were ill-considered and inaccurate."

Mr. Hewitt said the trouble arose when school officials objected to his marrying a colored woman.

THEY SAID COLOR
The school, in a statement issued Tuesday, said the objection was to a "mixed marriage," not to Mrs. Hewitt's color.

"We were told the objection was to a mixed marriage all right," said Mr. Hewitt. "But when I asked what was meant by 'mixed' religion or color, they said color."

Mr. Hewitt said their return to the school was conditional on Mrs. Hewitt signing the headmaster's statement. Both described the statement as "stupid."

Mrs. Hewitt said it was obviously designed as a "face-saving" device for the school "and I feel sure we would only have been allowed to remain at the school until the controversy died down."

"They just wanted to get me to sign it so we would look like troublemakers," interjected Mrs. Hewitt.

REPAY FARE
The youthful-looking teacher said he would return to the Shawinigan Lake school later this week to pick up his belongings "and that is the last I want to see of it."

He added that he would probably repay the school for his fare to Jamaica "because I certainly don't want to be under any obligation to them."

Mrs. Hewitt said she was looking forward to living in Canada and reiterated statements made in Toronto that she expects to encounter no further incidents because of her color.

She also said she might try to find employment in Vancouver as a fashion model.

"But I'll just have to wait and see what John decides to do," she added. "If he decides to go to a rural school some place outside Vancouver, that's where I'll go."

I have been greatly impressed, too, by the strong signs of growth and power which it gives. But above all else, I have been impressed by your people.

Egyptian Delegate To UN Dies

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (CP)—Dr. Mahmoud Azmi, leader of the Egyptian delegation to the United Nations, died Wednesday after collapsing at a meeting of the Security Council.

Dr. Azmi was addressing the council on the Israeli-Egyptian item when he collapsed.

Egyptian sources said Dr. Azmi suffered a heart attack. His condition was complicated by the fact that he suffered from diabetes.

Delegates carried him from the council chamber to an anteroom where doctors examined him.

Ratification Move Begun

PARIS (Reuters)—Premier Pierre Mendes-France moved swiftly Wednesday to begin the complicated process leading to French ratification of the German rearmament treaties. First he outlined the treaties to the foreign affairs committee of the assembly. Then he got the steering committee to approve the dates he fixed for the parliamentary debate on the treaties, December 14-17.

Technicians Fail To Pass Muster

NEW DELHI (AP)—India's minister of commerce and industry, T. T. Krishnamachari, Wednesday said "two out of four" foreign technicians sent to help India are proving unsatisfactory.

At the Bay Thursday . . .

Brighten your home this winter with beautiful tropical plants that will root and grow in air!

Direct from Hawaii
"Aloha" plants
Special price, each
29c

Enjoy the freshness of spring in your home all winter with a display of lovely Aloha Plants. So easy to grow, they root in air and then the roots can be put in pots to produce large exotic plants with clusters of bell-like flowers. The plants are about 12" high. A continuous supply of roots will always be available from the leaves of your plants to start new ones.

With each plant you purchase you receive a fresh Vanilla Orchid, for your lapel, without extra charge.

BAY Notions, Main Floor

Your face will feel cleaner, your complexion finer after you've used Richard Hudnut's gentle Pink Suds!

If you've got a sensitive skin that's irritated when you give it a soap-and-water wash, you'll love new Pink Suds that's more effective than soap, yet as gentle as a cream. Just a few drops of this fragrant foam to wash your skin leaves it cleaner, clearer and baby soft.

Nazism Still Exists in Germany, Says Editor

Under cover, Nazism still was "the gamble of the 12 German divisions," and how they existed in Germany, according to Ernest Watkins, assistant editor of the London Economist and a well-known BBC commentator. Dealing with the problem of European defense and the refusal of France to accept EDC, Mr. Watkins pointed out to the Victoria Chamber of Commerce yesterday that the whole thing

He added that Germany it is not always good policy," he added. He contended Britain was not to blame for the European muddle. "Britain was wrong in thinking it could stay out of Europe," said Mr. Watkins. "We cannot escape the consequences of what takes place in Europe. We are all in it and we cannot get out of it. No man is an island," he said. He added that Britain is most vulnerable of all the European nations.

Britain, however, under the Brussels treaty had now agreed to accept its supervisory commitments in Europe, and it was largely up to them to see that when Germany was reformed she would abide by the limitations imposed by the treaty, he said. At the same time, Mr. Watkins said, the present European problem was political rather than military. "There are sufficient international forces in Europe to prevent a repetition of Korea," he said. He regretted that the NATO plan for a European army had not materialized. "It was to have been the core of the European unity. You can enthrone over a united army, but not over a customs union," he added.

Mr. Watkins stated that he intended in the near future to come to live in Canada. Traveling across Canada on an active lecture tour, Mr. Watkins also addressed the United Nations Association at the Metropolitan Church Hall Tuesday night.

Dealing with India, he said that lack of a common language, now that English had been dropped as the governing tongue, was a major problem. "India must find a common language if she is to hold her independence and keep out the Communists," he declared.

Home Business License Plan Investigated

Sanctuary license inspector R. H. Wooten has been ordered to report to municipal council whether it is feasible to authorize small businesses trade licenses to operate from private homes. It is illegal at present to operate a business from a home in the municipality. The investigation arose from a council meeting this week at which a resident sought permission to operate a part-time tailoring business from his home. Mr. Wooten was asked to check the application.

$50,000,000 Revenue Drop Predicted by CPR Official

OTTAWA (CP) — A CPR executive said Wednesday the railway estimates its gross revenues this year will be $50,000,000 below the 1953 figure.

Charles D. Edsforth, assistant general traffic manager of the railway, made the statement inquiring into the agreed-charge method of setting freight rates.

He referred briefly to the financial position of the CPR after telling commissioner W. F. A. Turgeon that agreed-charge contracts are one method by which the railways can improve their revenue position.

Mr. Edsforth said that to September 30 the CPR's gross revenues were about $39,000,000 behind last year. He said the traffic department estimates this figure will increase to approximately $50,000,000 by the end of December.

The CPR's gross revenues in 1953 totaled $470,571,371. Net earnings amounted to $28,900,000, a reduction of $46,000,000 compared with 1952.

During Wednesday's hearing J. J. Frawley, counsel for Alberta, said agreed-charge contracts between the railways and shippers covering movement of goods from western Canada to British Columbia—destroy the effect of legislation enacted by Parliament in 1951.

Agreed charges are special freight rates negotiated by the railways with individual customers and embodied in contracts. They are usually lower than normal, in return for a guaranteed share of the shippers' business.

"The attorneys for the defense in this deal," says Alfred Shapovalov, modestly ignoring his own share in the proceedings with the East cards, "was my partner, S. Garton Churchill. His brilliant play earned us a fine score on this board in a recent New York City tournament."

Churchill, West, opened the king of spades. Free set the stage for the scene that followed when he overtook the king of spades and returned his lowest, the four-spot. This low card, led for partner to ruff, told West that East's re-entry was in the lower of the other two side suits—clubs. However, when South ruffed with the queen of hearts, Churchill calmly discarded the two of clubs. He couldn't lose his king of trumps anyway, and he knew that if he overruled and returned a club, South would trump, the next spade with the ten, and still be able to pick up his nine.

However, when West didn't overrule, South assumed that it was because he couldn't. If East had the king alone, it would drop under the ace; if he had king and one, South would need both his companions to drop.

to shut out a ruff on another spade lead and also to draw West's last trump. Therefore, South led the three of hearts to dummy's ace and returned the suit, his ten losing to West's king.

Now Churchill's patience paid off. He led a club to East's ace, and when the next spade came back, South was unable to stuff off losing a trick to West's remaining nine of hearts.

BY RITA DEL MAR

THURSDAY, NOV. 4, 1954

Today's quotation: "It is a woman's business to get married as soon as possible and a man's to keep unmarried as long as he can."

George Bernard Shaw

Thursday for everyone: The accent is on home, family, property, base of operations. Play safe; protect your interests involving assets. Differences of opinion arise readily. Use persuasion, courtesy, rather than forcefulness.

Look for your birthdates and birthdays below:

March 21 to April 18 (Aries) Be careful not to mix friendship and finances. Keep clear of speculative ventures.

April 20 to May 20 (Taurus) Items concerning business, career or prestige are subject to fluctuations. Stay on safe ground.

May 21 to June 20 (Gemini) - Accent cheerful thoughts but do not be impractical in your planning. Evaluate news, judgment carefully.

June 21 to July 22 (Cancer) - Build up financial reserves. Conserve energy. Be secretive about those things close to your heart.

July 23 to August 22 (Leo) You or your partner's interests are highlighted. Maintain harmonious relationships.

August 23 to September 22 (Virgo) - Attend to work, service, health interests. Pay attention to grooming. Give or gain service.

September 23 to October 22 (Libra) - Let others be aware of your feelings for them. Do not be hasty or reckless.

October 23 to November 21 (Scorpio) - Accent is on matters concerning your home, family or base. Keep your affairs down to earth.

November 22 to December 21 (Sagittarius) - Care for details, correspondence. Double check details. Maintain accord.

December 22 to January 19 (Capricorn) - You should have a new slant on money matters. Try your ideas before banking on them heavily.

January 20 to February 18 (Aquarius) - Give expression to the more attractive facets of your personality, make a nice appearance.

February 19 to March 20 (Pisces) - Take care of your obligations; inspire others to do likewise. Keep clear of troublesome situations.

Planning Ahead - Good for entertainment, sociability, etc.: November 5, 11, 13, 14, 17, 18.

City Immigrants Give Lie To East Germany Report

Denials of every statement made by a long-time Victoria resident who praised the East German Communist government last week have been made by two "new Victorians" who grew up in Europe and "want the world to know the truth."

"He must have been wrongly informed," says Winifred Severin, 574 Hillside, a 22-year-old divinity student who left Germany in July of this year and came to Victoria 10 days ago.

"I just can't believe him having that impression," says a young Viennese woman who asked to remain anonymous because her mother is trying to leave the Russian zone of Germany.

The Victoria, H. L. Johnson, 60, 5905 Patricia Bay Highway, retired furniture store owner, recently went with his wife to visit her family at Bad Liebenstein, East Germany, for two months.

Emphasizing that he is neither Communist nor politician, Mr. Johnson said he and his wife were the first Canadians given permission to make such a trip and added, "I am trying to do my bit to stop a third war."

WORKS AS GARDENER

Mr. Severin, a native of Berlin, went to Bavaria in 1946 but has since lived in Turingen province, where Bad Liebenstein is located. He is working as a gardener here to raise money for studies in a Lutheran seminary at Waterloo, Ont.

He says flatly that in East Germany "people are not free individuals and citizens, as they should be."

To "inform the people about the truth," he made these comments on Mr. Johnson's observations:

It may be true that Russian troops and German troops are "courteous and polite," but that has come since the "great revolution" last year.

It is absolutely wrong to say that cleanliness is almost a religion and human kindness is shown by everyone, prisoners returning from Russia say hygienic conditions in East Germany are as bad as those in Russia.

LOWEST VALUE

Wages are higher than those of West Germany, but the money has the lowest value of all in Europe; people are still living on rations; "it is a real lie" to say that food is very cheap.

Apartments are expensive, but there is plenty of room because so many people have fled to the West.

If churches are jammed, as Mr. Johnson says, it is because of "people who pray to God for help and strength to survive," many ministers are arrested and disappear secretly; people do not "hate the Americans like poison"—instead, they have begged the Americans for political asylum. Millions have fled from East Germany.

Mr. Severin said Bad Liebenstein, a famous spa, is open only to Communists and their friends, not to everyone, as Mr. Johnson stated.

The young woman, a sales clerk and Victoria resident for more than a year, said she grew up in Germany and Vienna and came to North America in 1948.

NO PREFERENCE

She expressed little liking for either Nazis or Communists, stating that life was "equally bad" under each regime.

A student under Nazi rule, she lost several friends and lived in a world where "your best friend would denounce you because he had told you a political joke... the first time someone told me a joke like that, I was terrified."

Then the Russians came in 1945, and after they "freed" Vienna, they plundered, burned and raped for 48 hours. The young woman escaped because she lived in an upstairs flat and the Russians who invaded the apartment were intent on reaching the wine cellar.

Order set in, she says, when the "clean" American troops arrived and the four zones were set up, but the Russians still attacked and stole.

REALLY FILTHY

"They were really filthy," she said. The woman admitted she has not been under a Russian regime for six years but added "conditions could not possibly have changed as much as Mr. Johnson says."

"Even now, my friends are begging me not to send them letters because a note from a foreign country makes them suspect."

She thought Mr. Johnson must have been "led around by some clever Communists—there is no other explanation." As for the future—"The Russians are very funny people; they can be awfully cruel and all of a sudden they are just like children."

"I don't think we will ever understand them... there never will be understanding between the East and the West."

'Difficult To Believe'

New Talks on Saar Asked in Germany

BONN, Germany (AP)—The day they would vote against the Free Democratic party, which ranks second in Chancellor Konrad Adenauer's four-party coalition. Wednesday night demanded renegotiation of the French-German agreement on the Saar.

The demand was made by the national committee in approving a decision of the party's 47 parliamentary deputies to reject the deal that would Europeanize the little German-speaking border state now linked economically to France.

It is difficult for a German to believe in a European Saar "when Trieste has again become Italian," a Free Democratic announcement said.

The 27 deputies of the coalition's refugee party said Tuesday.

A dozen of Adenauer's own Christian Democrats also are reported hostile to the settlement Adenauer reached with French Premier Pierre Mendes-France as a part of the Paris accords by which West Germany is to rearm as a free partner of the West.

Theories Rejected

Hitler Declared Dead as Doornail

BONN (NANA)—A weird drama is now being played out at Berchtesgaden. Hitler's old Alpine retreat. A Bavarian magistrate's court is primarily going about the task of declaring Hitler legally dead.

The Berchtesgaden court has refused to speculate that Hitler may be a prisoner of the Russians; that he escaped to Argentina or some south sea isle on a submarine; or that his features altered by plastic surgery. Hitler has gone back to housepainting in some German village as plain "Fritz Krause."

The court has even refused to issue a death certificate merely "presuming" Hitler to be dead. Hitler, the court has ruled, is dead beyond all doubt.

BAFFLING ATTITUDE

Almost since the day the war ended, the Germans have regarded Hitler with a strange detachment that has consistently baffled a wide assortment of Allied sociologists who have sought to probe the German mind.

Fanatical surviving Nazis and the slim crop of neo-Nazis are not afraid to get up in public and advocate the salvaging of the "good" from National Socialism, or to defend Nazi atrocities. But Hitler they never mention—neither in praise, extenuation nor defense.

At the opposite pole, the Germans who suffered most under Hitler similarly have little to say about Hitler personally. They still furiously denounce the Nazis, but there is a void in comment on Hitler directly.

When German cartoonists touch Hitler—which is not often—they treat him as a figure for ridicule. Occasionally Hitler is lampooned in carnival parades.

It is singular that when Germans discuss the atrocities and horrors perpetrated by the Hitler regime they are always referred to as the work of "the Nazis," never of Hitler personally.

At the war's end the Allies burned Hitler's uniforms, amid serio-comic secrecy, fearing they might become the "holy cloth" of a Nazi resurgence.

SENSATION VALUE

Now the Allies treat Hitler's personal possessions as they would those of any other German. The Bavarian government was permitted recently to return to Hitler's former housekeeper, Anni Winter, two autographed luxury edition copies of Mein Kampf, one of Hitler's briefcases and several Hitler watercolors and sketches.

Ruled the court handling the case: "These items have sensation value only, but are of no historic importance."

Appraising Hitler's likely future historical importance to the Germans, American occupation officials long have had a pat answer: "Hitler will be remembered as the man who built the autobahns."

Antique Sale of Year Coming Soon

Care to buy a century-old Chinese mandarin hat, with the mandarin's pigtail still attached? A set of six English wine glasses (circa 1700)? Or a matched set of rubber doormats (circa 1950)?

These and roughly 1,400 other lots of household furnishings will be on the block next week in what is heralded as "the antique sale of the year."

Maynard's auction rooms yesterday were bulging with four separate collections of furniture, art objects and antiques which will be offered.

Largest and most important collection is that of the late Mary Latimer Lodge, widow of Prof. Richard W. Lodge, of Boston. Others are from the estates of Mrs. F. H. McPherson and Miss A. M. H. Fleming.

There is also the collection of Col. F. O. St. John, former Victorian, heir-apparent to the Earl of Orkney and who has returned to Britain.

CANTON WAR

The pigtail-adorned mandarin hat was picked up by Miss Fleming's grandfather during the Canton War of 1850 when he was commanding officer of the old 59th Regiment, the "Prince of Wales' Pets."

In the Lodge collection is an Oriental Lowestoft porcelain bowl which carries what is believed to be the crest of one of the first American presidents.

There are a number of valuable paintings, including one executed in 1654 by the Dutch artist Molenaar.

Not all the pieces offered are collectors' items. The rubber doormats for example, are made of strips cut from old automobile tires—old, but not old enough to qualify as antiques.

Others are as modern as a 1953 model, 27-foot house trailer. There are a number of pieces of modern furniture and an assortment of household appliances and tools.

One of the best items in the large Lodge collection will not be offered to the public.

It is an early American (1780) Chippendale mahogany tallboy, which has been bequeathed to a Boston relative of the Lodges.

A. R. Roberts, president of Maynard & Sons, values it at about $2,500, which he admits is a "pretty fair price for a piece to store your shirts in."

Mr. Roberts, and his staff searched for hours for the signature of the maker of the piece. Had it been signed by a well-known craftsman, and had the workmanship been a trifle better, the tallboy would be worth much more, Mr. Roberts said.

A tallboy which only a connoisseur could tell from the Lodge piece recently sold in Boston for $20,000.

The sale will include many other fine pieces of furniture, including three grand pianos, plus stacks of rare china, silver, copper, brass and pewter ware and Oriental curios.

The massive collection which fills three salesrooms, will be offered next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Protopogon, Greek painter of the 4th century B.C., took seven years to paint his masterpiece "Iphigenia."

Sorting out some of the hundreds of antiques which will be auctioned in a three-day sale next week are W. H. Lund and Juanita Morris of Maynard & Sons. Mr. Lund holds a rare Lowestoft porcelain bowl; the crest is believed to be that of an early American president.

Combined RCAF, Army Scheme

Sub-Arctic Exercise Set in December

OTTAWA (CP)—A sub-Arctic training exercise for the RCAF's tactical and transport commands and the army's mobile striking force will be held near Fort Churchill, Man., early in December. Some 2,000 men will be involved.

The defense department said Wednesday exercise Bulldog Two has been planned on the theory that an enemy force has landed in Canada's central sub-Arctic area. The army and RCAF will be required to launch an airborne assault to reduce the enemy lodgement, using Edmonton as the main base and Fort Churchill as an advanced base.

All personnel, weapons, equipment and supplies of the assault force will be parachuted into the mock battle about 40 miles from Fort Churchill.

The defense department said Defense Research Board scientists will test "certain types" of equipment and supplies. It did not elaborate on this point.

Included in the exercise will be headquarters, western command; 1st Battalion, Royal Canadian Regiment; a troop of the 1st Regiment, Royal Canadian Horse Artillery; a troop of the 1st airborne squadron, Royal Canadian Corps of Signals; a section of the 2nd airborne platoon, Royal Canadian Army Service Corps.

Conference On Tax Plan Likely Soon

OTTAWA (CP)—A federal-provincial tax conference may be held before the end of the year to offer the terms of a proposed federal tax agreement with Quebec to the other nine provinces.

Prime Minister St. Laurent said Wednesday after a cabinet meeting that Premier Duplessis' new proposals for solving the Ottawa-Quebec income tax dispute will be studied by federal tax officials.

However, he said, the terms of any tax settlement with Quebec first will be referred to the premiers of the other nine provinces.

He hoped to have something to present to the premiers before the end of the year and indicated that a federal-provincial conference likely will be held for that purpose.

Early Arrival From India Dies, Aged 70

One of the first East Indians to come to Victoria died here on Tuesday.

Baboo Singh, 70, Burnside Road dairyman, came to Victoria in 1907 and took up farming immediately.

In recent years he has helped his uncle, J. S. Judge, with the management of Epsom Dairy. He was a member of the Sikh Temple and has played a prominent part in the activities of the East Indian population here.

Funeral will be on Saturday, leaving Hayward's Chapel at 1 p.m. for Royal Oak Burial Park where cremation will take place.

Ex-Resident Dies in U.K.

News of the recent death of a former Victorian, Capt. Thomas C. Pemberton, in Sussex, England, has been received by relatives here.

He first came to Victoria in 1909 to visit a cousin, the late F. B. Pemberton.

Captain Pemberton worked as a surveyor before going overseas in 1916 as commander of No. 2 Company of the 88th Battalion, Victoria Fusiliers.

He returned to Victoria after the war and married Ethel Pitts, daughter of the late S. J. Pitts. Captain Pemberton is survived by his wife; two daughters, and two grandchildren.

Rarely-Harvested Seed Crop Vital to Island's Beauty

We have been reminded this week of a seed crop rarely harvested and yet of prime importance. Without it our fair land would be drab indeed. We refer to seeds borne by our native and ornamental trees.

With a little thought, effort and patience many fine young plants can be obtained with ordinary garden facilities. Seeds such as willow, poplar, elm and maple should be gathered and sown as soon as they are ripe.

It is customary to think of seeds within a fruit being ripe when the fruit is ripe. This is not always so. Many tree seeds are immature when the fruit is ripe and may require a considerable time for the tiny embryo within the seed to develop and become mature. When this point has been reached germination can take place.

HOLLY SEED

Suitable temperatures for this embryo development are usually anywhere from 32 to 50 degrees Fahrenheit. Holly seed requires from one to 18 months after the berry is ripe before the seed is developed enough to germinate. And so after a period of after-ripening the embryo is able to penetrate the seed coat and grow into a vigorous seedling.

During this waiting period seeds must be kept moist in sand, sand and peat or light sandy soil. In many cases, simply the autumn planting of seeds in the garden is sufficient. There is a considerable interest in the growing and planting of young trees such as Lawson's cypress, Monterey cypress, junipers, yews and various conifers. All of these are interesting and worthy of growing where space permits.

Consumer preferences change with respect to food products, just as styles change from year to year in clothes, automobiles, furniture and innumerable other products. While in foods this change is more gradual, it is nevertheless very definite and in certain cases poses a real problem for the grower.

Take such a staple vegetable as cabbage, for instance. Twenty or 30 years ago cabbages of five or six pounds in weight could be readily sold to the housewife. Apparently she never thought of demanding a smaller size.

Perhaps the family was larger and there was a smaller variety of vegetables to choose from, so that the larger sizes were quickly disposed of. In any event there does not seem to have been any serious problem for the grower from the size standpoint.

BIG THIS YEAR

Nowadays the market preference is for a two-pound cabbage. In a season such as we have had this summer, with much more than average moisture, the cabbages tend to keep growing before heading up and becoming firm. This means that they are going to be much bigger, as a rule, than that two-pound size, and as a result many tons cannot be marketed.

Growers are now attempting to get around the difficulty by closer spacing. Where late cabbages were usually spaced from 18 to 24 inches apart in the row, they are now being crowded as close as nine inches apart to cut down size.

This is one common-sense approach to a difficult problem. The use of smaller-headed varieties is another possibility. The experimental station is interested in and is investigating both methods as a means of assisting growers.

Two interesting plants of the bulbous type giving a dash of color in the bulb garden now are Colchicum Autumnale and Crocus Salzmännli. Both have lavender-colored flowers, and although they are much alike in season and bloom, they belong to different families botanically.

Colchicum, or autumn crocus, as the genus group is referred to, belongs to the lily family. The crocus, on the other hand, which includes both fall and spring blooming species, belongs to the iris family. Another well-known member of the same household is the gladiolus.

One of the features of the crocus tribe that should be remembered is that the new corns form on top of the old ones and so there is a tendency to grow themselves out of the ground if they are left too long in one place. For this reason it is well to replant them every few years, covering them with approximately four inches of soil.

PREY FOR GULLS

If they are not replanted every few years, the corns at the soil surface are liable to be spotted by gulls, which will soon make short work of them. Apparently the tender white tips which are the signs of plant activity attract these birds when they forage farther inland in the fall months.

Colchicum bulbs, on the other hand, stay put when planted and that is the way they prefer to be—left alone. In fact they should not be disturbed until they show evidence of deterioration. The first signs of the bulbs going downhill are your cue to lift—separate the bulbs and replant. This should be done after the leaves wither. As the leaves emerge in the spring, this means lifting should be done about August.

Sailor's Death Ruled Suicide

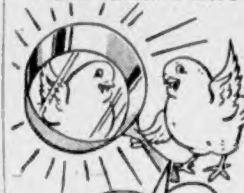

A coroner's inquiry has returned a verdict of suicide in the death of Brian Alton Block, 19, of HMCS Ontario, who Saturday evening plunged 50 feet at the federal government drydock, Dr. E. C. Hart said last night.

YOUR LOCAL DAILY NEWSPAPER

FROM THE ADVERTISER'S
POINT OF VIEW

"I know my advertising is accepted with authority when I place it in the local newspaper! A man may want to buy a new car, a radio or a power tool; he may have heard all about the advantages of this or that model but he still wants to 'read all about it,' to see the claims set down in authoritative black and white for his careful study. Women, too, look to newspaper advertising for the guiding facts on merchandise they plan to buy. In my opinion, no other advertising medium has the Selling Power of the Local Newspaper."

READER'S
POINT OF VIEW

"I wouldn't be without the newspaper published right here in my community! It's the authority on what's going on in our town, keeps our family informed on neighborhood happenings and world events, carries the features of local interest which are so important to every family. Its stories are of every-day living, the simple and homey events that touch our lives. In my opinion, no other reading matter entering the home is as vital to the family as the Local Newspaper."

BY ROY PARRETT

Latest word from my spies in Vancouver is that the permanent antenna tower for CBUT is completed on the Mount Seymour site. The antenna is in place now.

Over 4000 antennas now look out over British Columbia from an altitude of 3000 feet

When engineers complete their work, power will be boosted from the present 2500 watts to more than 100,000 watts and the signal beamed to the populated areas of the province.

A substantial increase in signal is expected here CBUT should be Victoria's strongest station after the power boost

Just when CBC engineers will get around to boosting the power isn't known. The report is that they will be working on the antenna system for another two months.

Which looks rather silly after KVOS-TV's lightning move to Ocas Island during a week end not long ago.

TV Concert Hour: Gladys Knight's famous musical drama The Medium will be presented over CBUT at 8:30 to night.

The Medium ran for seven months on Broadway, and had its Canadian premiere in Montreal from Salsburg and Jack Foster, both Canadians, will be featured in leading roles on tonight's telecast.

Tuning In: Super Circus comes to Victoria, complete with animals, acrobats, clowns and with Mary Hartline and the

U.S., Soviet Talks in New Phase

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Eisenhower chose as his first post election statement foreign issues which may action already exist. Wednesday an announcement dominated the second half of the United States is trying his term. He said himself the field of Russian-American negotiations foreign affairs is one where it should be possible to get ahead with Republican leadership in the atomic pool.

Fine Gardens

At Baden-Baden Just Like Home

Miss Margaret Sanson is a Victoria teacher who is in Germany to teach children of Canadian air force personnel stationed there. Her articles are directed to the younger readers.

BY MARGARET SANSON

In my first letter I think I said that you might be interested in hearing something about Baden-Baden's Kurhaus. Every week when we paid our bills at Hotel Baden a "Kurtaxe" of 5.60 DM (approximately $14.01) was included and the manager gave us a card which entitled us to enter the Kurhaus gates free of charge. When the weather was fine we could listen out of doors to a 30-piece symphony orchestra that played in the morning, afternoon and evening. In inclement weather the same orchestra played indoors in one of the Kurhaus concert halls.

The Kurhaus itself is an attractive white building surrounded by lawns and beds of beautiful flowers. Pam (Morley) Verdier told me that the flowers miraculously change overnight when the gardeners take out the overgrown blossoms and replace them with potted plants in full bloom.

FAMILIAR BLOOMS

Baden-Baden gardens, by the way, have the same flowers that Victoria gardens have. I can hardly wait until the spring when they tell me. Lichtenauer Allee is a blaze of color with magnolias and rhododendrons. By that time I hope to have perfected the art of color photography.

Germany's oldest and according to local bulletins its most beautiful casino is in the Kurhaus. Four of the rooms are most lavishly decorated. The White Room in Louis XVI style is rather austere compared to the brilliance of the Red Room, which is a copy of one of the rooms of Versailles. The Salon Pompadour is a small room modeled after the Chateau Trianon, and the largest hall, the Green Room, is of Renaissance architecture in Louis XIII style.

In sharp contrast to the overpowering splendor of these rooms is the modern simplicity of the newer rooms, added about 1944. Lovely painting, inlaid mosaic and modern lighting effects make these rooms especially attractive.

The main hallways of the Kurhaus are of beautiful marbles from Italy and the Belgian Congo. There are conference rooms of various sizes and a large ballroom which can be partitioned off and used as a concert hall. The Edmonton teachers and I went to a concert there to hear the Italian tenor Beniamino Gigli, who in his prime was considered the equal of Caruso. You haven't witnessed enthusiasm at its height until you have been to a concert with a German audience. They stamped, they shouted and they stood up and cheered at the first appearance of the artist. Halfway through the program they presented him with an enormous bunch of huge, long-stemmed chrysanthemums. Signor Gigli looked rather startled and didn't seem to know just what to do with them. He tossed them onto the piano, where they lay while he gave encore after encore.

OVER THE SHOULDER

He had walked part of the way off the stage when he remembered the flowers, so he went back to the piano, picked them up, threw them over his shoulder and stalked off the stage. The audience went wild with delight. We had never seen anything funnier and we laughed till our sides ached.

To appreciate the scene you would have to see Gigli himself. He has a figure exactly like that of Tweedle Dee and Tweedle Dum, and he is quite an actor. He winked at the people in the front row, flirted with a blonde in the balcony and simply captivated the entire audience.

Baden-Baden was founded by the Romans and under one of the churches in the old part of town people can still visit what was once a part of the Roman baths.

It is interesting to learn that even in the days of the early Romans heat was carried along the floor and walls through hollow tiles. There were rooms with high ceilings for the nobility, slightly lower ceilings for the people and very low ceilings for the soldiers. The present-day Kurhaus of Baden-Baden and the disagreeable water from the hot springs are reputed to cure almost every ailment.

It might interest you to know that Baden was the last province of Germany to come under the rule of Hitler. It is easy for us to believe this because of the kindly and helpful people we met. The driver of our bus, who can speak only a few words of English, is so kind and gentle and such a help with the kindergarten children.

RIDE ALONG

I wonder if the children remember how often I used to say last spring that I hoped we would be using buses in Germany? Well, my dear little friends, not only do I put the children on the bus at noon but I also climb on and ride first to

Kinsmen Air Cadets' Parade To Be Attended by Parents

Friday night will be parents' night at the parade of 89 Kinsmen Squadron, Royal Canadian Air Cadets, at the air force building on Yates Street.

Price Raised Half Cent On Top Grade Gasoline

Price of Imperial Oil Company's top grade of gasoline was raised half a cent yesterday at 13.1 cents a gallon, compared with 12.6 cents last week.

Shell Oil Company's top grade has been raised to 13.5 cents a gallon since early in the year.

British American Oil Company's top grade is selling the premium grade around 12.7 or 12.8 cents a gallon. Mobil's top grade is about 12.8 cents.

Imperial explained that special ingredients recently added to its top grade produce is the reason for the price boost.

Imperial's increase came as local retailers were still adjusting prices following a Canada-wide reduction of one-half cent a gallon for premium and regular grades effected about two weeks ago by wholesalers of all major oil companies.

Gasoline prices are free from control and there have been slight variations of prices at city service stations, even among those buying from the same wholesaler.

Public Works Traffic Engineer J. H. Harding, RCMP Constable C. A. Baragar, and PTA members Mrs. E. I. McComan and Frank Phillips outlined the traffic problems around the school.

Some of the hazards mentioned included the stop sign at the intersection of the old Island Highway and the Trans-Canada Highway, on which speed limit is 40 miles per hour, created considerable discussion.

Diversion of the traffic from the old Highway, down Jedburgh to Helmcken in the Trans-Canada Highway was criticized by parents but Mr. Harding assured them that this will be remedied in two months.

NEWS REVIEW

By Erith M. Smith

(From AP, CP, Reuters, UP)

A member of the B.C. Milk Board yesterday told the Royal Commission in Vancouver investigating the milk industry that milk was a public utility, and prices for it should be fully controlled. Speaker was Dr. H. M. King, who said that in his opinion regulations should cover price to the farmer, spread to the distributor and cost to the consumer — thus working to the advantage of both public and industry.

Following three decades later in his father's footsteps, Robert Taft, Jr., will sit in Ohio's House of Representatives next January. The 37-year-old lawyer was elected on his first try for office.

Provincial trucking associations meeting in Ottawa have attacked the railways' agreed charges system of rate setting, now under investigation by a federal royal commission.

Saskatchewan's department of mineral resources yesterday announced a radioactive find 10 miles northwest of La Ronge in the northwestern part of the province. The discovery, reported to show a small amount of uranium, was made by two men working under the Saskatchewan Prospector's Assistance Plan.

Back in Ottawa the general manager of the CBC, J. A. Chumet, yesterday demanded that a Montreal columnist prove or retract his charge that CBC producers have been collecting "black money" from TV performers.

RAF officials at Edmonton said Wednesday that poor weather is delaying the search for six Eskimos missing since about October 13, near Brad Island, 925 miles north of the Alberta capital.

Canada's ambassador to Brazil, S. D. Pierce, will head this country's delegation to the eighth general conference of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization to be held November 12 to December 11 at Montevideo, Uruguay.

Five Winnipeg hunters, headed by provincial game and fisheries director Gerry Malaher, have left Winnipeg for the Delta marshes of southern Lake Manitoba to obtain food fit for a queen — Queen Mother Elizabeth. Officials in Ottawa, arranging a banquet November 16 for the Queen Mother, want to have food representative of each province on the tables and Manitoba's requirement is 70 wild ducks.

An Ottawa dispatch says the Canadian government has apologized to Premier Grantley Adams of Barbados, who is colored, because he was refused a room in Montreal's Windsor Hotel. Officials said they had learned such action was not the policy of the hotel and the specific case was based on some clerk's stupidity.

From Berlin comes word that the Soviet high commissioner in Germany has proposed that Baron Konstantin von Neurath, ex-Nazi foreign minister, should be released from prison on the grounds of his ill health and age. He is serving a 15-year sentence as a war criminal in Spandau prison.

Sailors' "rustlers" are keeping their heads low in the harbors of the Atlantic. Officials there are hunting down for only Indians who first have caught and obtained permission are allowed to catch the fish now on their way through the cold Thompson River waters to the spawning grounds.

Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia has arrived in Amsterdam from Paris, for a four-day official visit in The Netherlands. He was welcomed by Queen Juliana and Prince Bernhard, his hosts, at the Central railway station.

Speaking in a broadcast message, Premier T. C. Douglas of Saskatchewan yesterday urged a program of federal-provincial-municipal public works to reduce unemployment and stimulate the national economy.

First in Office

Ahmadu Bello, of Sokoto, has been elected the first prime minister of Northern Nigeria under a new constitution set up with the cooperation of the British government. The rank of sarduna, a historical one, is a title of honor. The 45-year-old prime minister is a descendant of a long line of hereditary rulers. He is a Moslem and his religion, the Sultan of Sokoto, is spiritual leader of Northern Nigeria, 11,500,000 Moslems. (Central Press Canadian)

Adventurer Seeks Fabulous Gold Mine

Mysterious B.C. Prospector Identified

VANCOUVER (REAP) — A United Press.

Agar, only person alive who knows where Bremner is, is a prospector whose search for the legendary Lost Creek Gold Mine has been shrouded in a cloak of mystery. He was identified Wednesday as a veteran adventurer who has spent several years prospecting the rugged coastal mountain ranges.

The man who dared defy the curse of an Indian who took the secret of the fabulous mine with him in the gullies was identified as Jim Bremner about 35.

C. C. Agar, operator of Okanagan helicopters, who has been flying Bremner to the site of his search, disclosed Bremner's identity to the British.

Let's See How Other Half Lives

CAMBRIDGE, N.Y. (AP) — A local option vote Tuesday made this village half wet and half dry.

The main street is the dividing line with half of the village on the north side of Cambridge and the other half in the town of White Creek.

Voters in the town of Cambridge approved the sale of liquor for consumption on and off the premises, as well as its sale in connection with the operation of hotels.

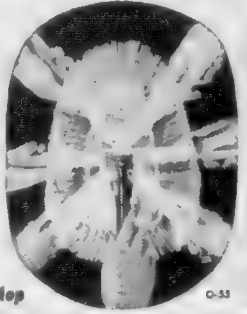

FINE FABRICS — Broadcloth, neatly decorated fabrics with a slightly raised pattern, were made in Italy and Spain as early as the 13th century.

Advancing Railway Program

ANNOUNCEMENT by Premier Bennett that Pacific Great Eastern Railway contracts will be let next spring to bridge the Fraser River and carry the roadbed of the provincially owned line 65 miles northward towards a junction point that would serve either northwest or northeast extensions later is evidence that the government means business on its railway program. Favorable conditions experienced in the Squamish-Vancouver terminal link, where costs have been held to a reasonable figure, and the current stimulus offered to the coast province by marked outside interest in the development of the Yukon and northern areas of B.C. no doubt influenced the decision to quicken the pace of the program. The announcement is also an indication that the province is satisfied with the existing state of its revenues, otherwise retrenchment even on loan projects might have been invoked.

In this move the administration is following the letter of the program it laid before the electors for the extension of the PGE into Vancouver and northward from Prince George to link up with the Peace River. The project was stressed again as a main element in the government's statement of its intentions in the last Speech from the Throne. So there has been no surprise about it. The fact that the government is contemplating a speed-up of rail development probably means that it has found the going favorable and extension costs within estimates.

Premier Bennett was careful to explain that the northerly point of advance to Red Rock Creek is still some distance south of the natural junction from which the railway could be taken either on into Alberta through one of the alternative passes in the Rockies; or northwest into the Yukon, as part of a separate and larger project. The future of British Columbia's northern section has not yet fully crystallized. In this current step the province is playing it safely by adhering to a route common to both north-east and northwest developments.

Modern Diogenes Goes Home

FINANCIAL straits rather than common sense have prevailed upon Mr. Roy Bergo of Edmonds, Washington, to give up for the current year at least his attempt to voyage to Alaska in a baby's bathtub. There is usually a good deal of popular sympathy for anyone who essays to do something daring and unorthodox, but that feeling was lacking in the case of Mr. Bergo and his bathtub because his feat was about as pointless as sitting on top of a flagpole or swallowing live goldfish, and far more dangerous.

Even if Mr. Bergo could have brought it off his voyage would have demonstrated nothing except that it is possible to sail from Puget Sound to Alaska in a bathtub, which would invite the comment, "So what?" Such a feat would scarcely be likely to foster bathtub navigation as a means of transportation or even as a pastime.

Mr. Bergo says he wished to study tides and currents. It may be conceded that this is a kind of study which could be done in a bathtub if that were one's preference—provided the tub was indoors where tubs should be and the student confined himself to the excellent textbooks that have been written on the subject, based on years of research with the aid of scientific equipment in which Mr. Bergo's bathtub appears to have been somewhat deficient.

Though lack of money and the less than friendly attitude of the United States and Canadian authorities have persuaded the lone mariner to return to his fireside, he hasn't given up altogether. "Wait till next year," he says darkly. The best advice to Mr. Bergo is to obey his own injunction and in the meantime—if he is really determined to voyage alone by sea—to buy or build himself a more suitable vessel. Another and earlier eccentric named Diogenes is reputed to have found a tub conducive to study, but he was practical-minded enough to keep dry land under it.

Back to the Woodshed

A MAINLAND judge applied good common sense to a case which came before him this week. He ordered a parent to take his erring son to the woodshed and there apply a well-known old-fashioned method of correction. He did this for two reasons: first that the boy was not a criminal and a spell in jail would tend to make him one, and second that psychological treatment would simply be coddling.

The jurist's sound judgment has much in its favor. In many instances a return to the homely form of punishment that stood the test of time in earlier generations would not come amiss. Modern psychology is all very well but it lacks the salutary sting of discipline and too often is merely laughed at by its beneficiaries. On the other hand, present-day jails are poor places to influence for good a first or youthful transgressor, being mostly of an environment that hardens instead of curing any tendency to go astray.

Only in one respect perhaps was there a flaw in the judge's decision. The culprit in question, a teen-ager, was convicted of a charge much more serious than a youthful run-of-the-mill misdemeanor; that of indecent assault on a young girl. A woodshed thrashing might truly cause him to reflect on the error of his ways but probably the corrective would be much more effective were it administered not by his own parent but by the father of his victim.

Living Up to a Name

THE directors of the Junior Chamber of Commerce have changed the name of their now well established B.C. Products Fair. There is substance in the reasons cited for the change, but a drawback also. Some potential exhibitors have been inhibited from taking part because their goods were not made in B.C., although other firms do not allow this to prevent the display of their wares. It is said also that to call the fair the "Victoria Industrial and Agricultural Exhibition," the name chosen, will lead to enlargement of the show and mean bigger and better displays in future.

That might be so, although of course the new name completely ignores the genesis of the whole affair, which was a display intended to promote the sale of provincially-produced goods and show people at large what B.C. had in the way of resources and natural trade aptitudes. The new name certainly widens the scope of exhibits for future years but it suggests an exhibition on a scale which may invite disappointment because of its limitations. Commendable as the products fair has been to date, and it has been excellently presented and won much praise, it cannot under existing conditions match the all-embracing sound of its new title. The latter is apt also to cause confusion should the larger-scale exhibition come to fruition along with the racetrack now under consideration in this area.

Interpreting the News

The U.S. Elections

By J. M. ROBERTS
Associated Press News Analyst

THE Democratic "sweep" which appeared to be in the making, even through the first few hours of vote-counting, has turned out to be something less than that.

Despite the importance of committee chairmen changes in Congress, the turnover is much less than the average for off-year elections.

The Democrats, of course, will follow the seniority rule in reappointing the Eisenhower administration.

Insofar as Eisenhower was unable to stop what has become traditional for off-years, there may be some loss of prestige. As applied to the Eisenhower program, there is a great deal of ground for argument which the Republicans will make use of. But since the Republican candidates in nearly all cases tried to make it appear their defeat would be a slap at Eisenhower, he and they are going to have to lie in the bed they have made on that score.

Actually, there is more than one point where the returns give Eisenhower's program considerable advantage.

For instance, neither the Democrats nor the Republicans who tried to block Secretary of Agriculture Benson's flexible farm price support program will feel so brash as they did before.

A lot of surveys had shown that a good number of farmers were willing to pay something for reclamation of a part of their traditional independence. Whatever it was, the biggest farm states continued to go along with the Republicans. Dairying areas were an exception. They have complained most at Benson.

From many standpoints this election was highly inconclusive as a national barometer for 1956. The general issues which the national leaders sought to establish for the most part fell flat. It was evident that local issues and local personalities were the deciding factors in too many places.

"... of shoes—and ships—and sailing was—of cabbages and kings."

By TOM TAYLOR

IF the influences of boyhood are what they are supposed to be, then a man whose birth centenary is being observed is partly responsible for what I am. At any rate in my desk is a small Bible the flyleaf of which tells me I got it for attendance at the Boys' Brigade.

Shades of yesterday, the Boys' Brigade! White haversack, pillbox cap, buckled belt and imitation wooden rifle. What fun! Rather innocent fun I daresay, perhaps too naive for young boys here. There are some B.B. companies in Canada; I know there was one at the local St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church some years ago but apparently it perished out.

Yet there are Boy Scouts galore and in part at least the scouts grew out of the B.B. Baden-Powell's "Scouting for Boys" first appeared in the B.B. Gazette and B.P. was anxious for a union, but the scouts were too secular for the man who would be 100 years old were he alive today.

Sir William Smith was his name, born in Thurso of a God-fearing family with a military tradition, although the knighthood came later. He was a Sunday school teacher in Glasgow and as a young man became distressed by the disorder and delinquency of the boys in his district.

So he started the 1st Company of the Boys' Brigade, based on discipline and religion.

I belonged to the 6th Company. Learning now as I do of Sir William's initial purpose I hope this doesn't mean I was a delinquent needing the Bible and a rifle in a sort of General Gordon-like prophetic.

Last year when I was in Glasgow I passed a mission hall of familiar B.B. days. I made my way in and crossed the lobby to two well-remembered swing doors. They were fastened but I peered through the centre crack to glimpse the parade room where we sloped arms, marched and said our prayers. On annual inspection night the mothers and friends would turn up to watch their little boys parade proudly and receive their prizes.

Not so little either for I was the B.B. leaving age and some lads were pretty hefty by that time, as those of us who played on the football team knew only too well.

But what I was going to say was that the building itself hadn't changed and it looked quite respectable, so perhaps all B.B. boys weren't delinquents.

I remember Sir William well. Fifty years there was a tremendous field day in Glasgow's Queen's Park and the founder of the Boys' Brigade, a fine moustached figure in navy blue suit and Glangarry cap, rode a big brown horse, galloping here and there as thousands of boys were marshalled like they were real soldiers. Just as good at drill too they were, if I may say so with becoming modesty. I believe this year's parade was watched by 60,000 spectators, some proof of the strength of the B.B. movement.

Now it is world-wide, a tribute to the kindly but strict discipline of the founder. "Sure and Steadfast" was the motto, taken from the Epistle to the Hebrews.

Sir William Smith died in 1914 and three months later a veritable host of his boys shouldered real rifles and went forth, steadfast and sure to a destiny we shall recall next week on Remembrance Day.

Reports from Ottawa

HON. Lester Bowles Pearson, fresh from the conference table in Paris, where the knotty "German problem" was finally solved, cut quite a jaunty figure when he received the press last week.

Almost a prime ministerial figure, some think. His blue pin-stripe seems a little conservative when one recalls the ball-playing, wise-cracking Mike Pearson of yore—but his conformity to diplomatic fashion is relieved by his hallmark, a blue bow tie with brightly colored dots.

He strides confidently into the room, preceded by a mousy girl secretary armed with pencil and notebook. She's Pearson's insurance. Three or four junior diplomats mingle with the newsmen. Mike doesn't need their help in answering correspondents' questions, but they want to hear the minister's views on the Paris parley.

Pearson has a boyish grin for the 60-odd writers, and a special nod for I. Norman Smith of the Ottawa Journal and Raymond Daniell of the New York Times, whose favor Pearson prizes. He seats himself at the head of a long conference table and, toying with his favorite prop, his dark horn-rimmed glasses, he's ready for the press.

The reporter of the Hogtown Bugle likes to make little jokes with people being interviewed. He leaps in to ask if Pearson got home on schedule, in obvious reference to the foreign minister's Atlantic crossing early in October, when the plane developed engine trouble and returned to Britain.

"Two hours out of Ottawa the weather closed in, and it looked as though we'd have to land at Moncton," Pearson accents Moncton as though it were on the outer fringe of Lower Slobbovia. That is a Ministerial Sally, and draws an appreciative titter.

The jolly chit-chat continues for several minutes. Did Pearson cross the Atlantic this year as often as U.S. State Secretary Dulles? No, only nine times—or was it eight?

Hard to keep track when you are on the go so much. And does Mike expect to be home for Christmas? "You bet!"

Significantly, it is Pearson who has to call the halt on this time-wasting procedure, so he can "report on what we did in Paris." Most of the reporters scribble what he says without question, as if mesmerized by the Pearson personality. A few speak up, but most of their questions are innocuous, deferential, or easily demolished by Ministerial Wit. Only satirist Alex Hume of the Ottawa Citizen stands out in his efforts to pin Pearson down.

And so it continues for an hour and a quarter. Nobody disturbs the we're-all-pals-together atmosphere save Hume—and nobody gets any real news.

I jot down notes on a couple of human interest items about the Paris conference—and later I discover that one was in the New York Herald Tribune the previous Sunday, and the other on Monday.

All that Pearson really gives out is his opinion that the Paris parley was a success, and that things are looking up internationally. Anybody who'd read the papers for the last week knew that.

When the reporters get Pearson on the griddle, why don't they fry him with hot questions? Well, to a considerable extent it's because he's "my pal Mike." It's also because some don't know enough about foreign affairs to ask any. And it's also because knowledgeable reporters prefer to look for tips in what Pearson volunteers, and dig out exclusive stories later, instead of asking questions when three score competitors can benefit from the answers.

Unwanted Pennies

(From BBC News Letter)

THE cost of living has risen everywhere since the war and one feature of this rise in prices is that Britain does not know what to do with her pennies, which are piling up in the banks' coffers without any one seeming to have a use for them.

In brighter days children could get an appreciable amount of sweets for a penny but now they need a good deal more than this to buy a bag of delectable morsels to appease a sweet tooth.

The penny's purchasing power has never been so low, and Godfrey Talbot, speaking in a BBC program, said that for five years now the Royal Mint in London has made no new pennies for general circulation and has supplied all demands from 1949 stock.

The penny, apart from its prime disadvantage of not being able to buy much, is also rather large and heavy. "Day to day requirements," said Talbot, "are better served by a pocketful of threepenny pieces and sixpences and shillings than by a pocketful of pennies." The 12-sided brass threepenny bit is popular now, although not very long ago, when it was introduced in place of the old, small silver threepenny bit, few people had much good to say for it.

Sixpences and shillings are always in demand, for sixpenny and shilling, in-the-slot meters, particularly the latter, have now largely replaced the old penny-in-the-slot.

There are still 2,000,000,000 pennies going round and round Britain at the present time but every week some of them go sliding into their last resting places in the vaults of banks for the Royal Mint.

Fun, Fact and Fiction

The Hollywood actor who remarried the day he got a divorce acted in the great tradition of aviation: that the pilot who walks away from a crash must go right up again or lose his nerve.

"Will Rogers," says a columnist, "wrote many of his best pieces while sitting on the running-board of his car." This may explain why America has never had a second Will Rogers—no running-board.

Inveterate borrower—Using your lawn mower this afternoon, old man? Neighbor—Fraid I am. Borrower—Good, then you won't mind if I borrow your golf clubs.

An expert on etiquette is asked: "What do you do with the wrapper from a lump of sugar when you are dining out? Put it on the saucer of your cup or in the ashtray?" Neither. Wad it up and put it in your pocket, along with the olive pits.

The Packsack

OF GREGORY CLARK

PACKAGING, as they call it, is now an art, almost a fine art, that stands very high on the agenda of both industry and the advertising profession. But packaging has its pitfalls, the chief of which is the thought that might be inspired in the public's mind that they are paying more for the package than for the contents. This is an illusion that will be dispelled in due time, because plastics and other materials employed in modern packaging are becoming so commonplace that where, a year or two ago, a man would be in hiding around the kitchen to snatch one of those tissue-like synthetic bags the groceries come in, to keep his tobacco, now they are tossed away as casually as paper bags were.

One of my problems is to find small tin boxes to keep used razor blades in. A piggy bank is too large for the crowded medicine chest in the bathroom. So I asked my druggist if he had any small boxes. I could beg for the purpose. He went behind the partition and appeared with a cartoon full of the most extraordinary collection of beautiful little transparent plastic boxes you ever saw. Some were hinged, some were telescoping. I seized a handful of them to serve far more delightful uses than storing old razor blades. I took some for trout flies, since, not five years ago, I had to pay a couple of dollars for a fly box made out of the same stuff; and others for keeping bachelor buttons in, and collar stiffeners, and paper fasteners, and all the small elusive things a man gradually amasses around himself and his desk or bureau drawers.

"Help yourself," said the druggist, cheerily. "I'm glad to be rid of them."

"How do you get them?" I enquired.

"Well, sir," said the druggist, confidentially, "in this business, we have to consider certain psychological factors. Some of the costliest drugs and preparations have to be bought both by poor people and rich. Drugs are not luxuries. When a customer of modest means has to pay $8 for what one of these boxes contained, I always take it out and put it in a cardboard pillbox. I don't want to distress him with any thought that the package is part of the cost. It isn't, of course—it is a matter of a couple of cents."

Life on Mars

NEW evidence that Mars is a living planet marks the end of a six-month astronomical expedition of the National Geographic Society and the Lowell Observatory of Flagstaff, Arizona.

"Mars is alive. It has to be," said Dr. E. C. Slipher, returning from Bloomfontein, South Africa, with 20,000 new photographs of earth's near neighbor.

"If things did not grow there, changing with the seasons, the astronomer reasoned, 'dust from the red deserts of Mars would have settled long ago over its entire face. The planet would be all one color.'"

Instead, photographs made with the 27-inch telescope of Bloomfontein's Lamont-Hussey Observatory show clearly the great blue-green markings that characterize Martian geography. Significant changes in these were found.

Polar caps gleam white, frost areas appear, clouds and dust storms swirl across the surface. At least two new "canals"—faint and hazy, but really there—were photographed for the first time. Exposures made through colored filters penetrated the Martian atmosphere.

Mars in 1954 made a near approach to earth, closest in 13 years. Observatories all over the world, led by the International Mars Committee, joined a co-ordinated research effort. The "Mars Expedition" to Bloomfontein played a leading part.

Should the mysterious markings of Mars be caused by vegetation, it is almost certain to be extremely simple in nature, much like the lichens that cling to rocks where nothing else can grow. The red planet has little oxygen and less water. These seem less than scant possibility that any animal life similar to earth's could exist under Martian conditions.

Yet its "oases" change color, grow, and shrink with the seasons. In areas of Martian spring, Dr. Slipher found markings broader and more intense in color than any he had seen in 50 years of observation. The Lowell recognized authorities on the planets. "This last year," he said, "must have been a very good and fertile year on Mars." Certainly it has been for member scientists of the International Mars Committee.

While they study, measure, and map 1954's photographs, astronomers look ahead to 1956. Another near approach—the last until 1971—will bring Mars then within 35,000,000 miles, and perhaps many of its mysteries.

Oak Bay Approves Halloween Damage Parley on Wages

Oak Bay council agreed last night to meet local representatives of the Municipal Employees' Association November 9 to discuss changes in wages and working conditions.

Secretary W. E. Marshall informed council that the inside staff wishes to bargain separately from the outside staff.

Oak Bay firemen, members of Local 730, International Association of Fire Fighters, will open their collective bargaining November 9 with council's fire committee.

Included in their suggestions for 1955 are:

Armistice Day and Boxing Day should be added to the list of statutory holidays; three days' leave without loss of pay should be granted all employees upon the death of an immediate relative; and firemen doing mechanical work should be paid $10 more than normally, plus $1.25 for "callins" of a mechanical nature.

The firemen also suggest that a clause covering sickness be added to the present agreement.

Halloween Damage Estimated

Halloween damage in Oak Bay totaling $200 was described at a council meeting last night as "regrettable, but not too bad," by Reeve Fred Norris.

It included the smashing of 28 ornamental glass globes in the Uplands and damage to five trees in the district; a meter box cover broken; three street signs smashed; and the railing on Bowker Creek bridge damaged.

Council was informed that a fire in the district on Halloween would have been difficult to combat because of loss of water after five hydrant caps were stolen.

Boilermakers Hit Paper's Attitude

A protest from the local Union Council (A.F.L.-C.I.O.) last night hit the attitude of the Daily Colonist in its editorial department and its radio commentator Dick Hickey, who said the paper's attitude was "a real reception from the Victoria and District Union Council."

Oil Fire Resists Fighters

MA ME O BEACH, Nov. 3.—A fire in the oil tank of a boat in the harbor here was fought for hours by firefighters. The fire was caused by a leak in the tank and the oil spread over the water. The firefighters used high-pressure water to fight the fire, but it was difficult to reach the tank because of the rough water.

Committee To Probe Proposed Power Deal

VERNON (CP) The Board the government was "giving" of Trade Wednesday instructed away" provincial resources to its executive to set up a fact-finding committee to investigate the proposed power development deal between the B.C. government and Kaiser Aluminum Company.

The move followed protests by several board members that the government was "giving" away provincial resources to the detriment of B.C. industry.

The U.S. company is seeking to build a storage dam on the Lower Arrow Lakes to provide the United States with surplus hydro-electric power. Some of the power would be returned to B.C.

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Three men were charged with impersonating police officers Wednesday after they and a fourth man allegedly forced a city couple into a car at gunpoint Tuesday night.

Charged were Agil Ali Shama, Peter Korlund and Edward A. Konkin.

PENTICTON (CP) — Southern District Council of the B.C. Fruit Growers' Association Wednesday criticized packing houses and roadside stands for selling fruit not measuring up to standards.

Growers contend poor quality fruit which should be dumped is sold to the detriment of the industry.

TRAIL (CP) — An additional grant of $500 to the Salvation Army by the Trail Welfare Society has resulted in the resignation of the society's finance committee chairman and first vice-president.

Jack H. Lunny announced Wednesday that he had resigned as the society's budget committee chairman because he felt he was "obviously out of touch with the majority opinion of the directors."

The experts, of course, will get a lot of mileage explaining what the results of this election mean. But the outcome seems best summed up in the words of Terry Brennan, Notre Dame's youthful football coach, after his team and beaten Michigan State 20-19.

"It was closer," Terry said, "than the score indicates."

Attempts to get him to eat some of his stronger campaign words didn't get far either, although he did soften them a little. Now that he was faced with the actual prospect of a Democratic House, Eisenhower said he had put it too strong when he said it would be a cold war if a Democratic Congress were elected.

Naturally someone asked him if he'd seek another four-year term when this one runs out two years from now. No positive answer, other than to say nothing in the election results had made him change his plans.

To this reporter, it seemed Eisenhower came close to irritation only once. That was when a Wednesday morning quarter-back asked him if the election might have been different if he had begun campaigning earlier.

At this suggestion that he might be blamed for Republican losses, Eisenhower replied — a little sharply, it seemed that he'd been in there pitching right along.

Well, that's the way it went. Anyone who looked for "A" in side dope on how the game might have been played differently or "B" some hot political tips on future action must have been disappointed.

MANY women simply do not know their right from their left. I am sorry if this statement annoys you, madam, but I feel myself honor bound to report the truth as I see it.

At one time I thought my wife was the only woman who didn't know left from right. It bothered me. In all other ways she seemed intelligent enough. (Yes, in her selection of husbands, too. You want to make something of it, Miss?)

I asked around and learned that a number of other women live in the same kind of non-directional world.

My wife was quite smug when I reported the results of my survey. "You see, I'm quite normal after all," she said triumphantly.

"Now look," I said. "You have been driving a car for several years. What do you do when a sign says 'Left Turn'?"

She made up-and-down motions with both hands like a mad maestro leading an orchestra. "I say to myself, leftright, leftrightleft," she explained. (So help me, this is true. I'm not making it up.)

"And then I know which is my left hand," said my wife.

"But you were in the air force," I said. "Surely they must have taught you left and right in the service? It should be second nature."

"I didn't go on many of the parades."

I held my head, trying to soothe the little throb of frustration which was starting.

"Well, what do you do when a sign says 'Right Turn'?" I asked gently.

My wife sawed the air with her hands again. "I say to myself, leftright, leftrightleft," she explained, ending with the right hand held up. "And then I know which is right," she said.

"But you start with your left hand," I pointed out. "So you must know which is which."

"Not without thinking of it. Oh, I don't have to wave my arms. I do it in my head."

"Let's try a new approach," I said. "You know which hand you have a ring on. You know which hand you eat and throw with. So why don't you know left from right?"

"I made up this formula for telling right from left when I was nine years old, in Miss Barnett's gym class, and it has worked for me ever since," my wife said with some annoyance.

"Please don't mix me up now, or I'll never get it straight."

So we let the subject drop. But I still wake up at night sometimes and worry about it.

Garden Notes

Swindler Paid For Tree Cure

BY M. V. CHESNUT, FRHS

One of the loveliest of the spring flowering shrubs grown in and around Victoria is the Forsythia, whose graceful sprays covered with pendant golden bells blend so exquisitely with the pink of the flowering almond which blooms at the same time. Today's Garden Notes are not to be about the Forsythia, however, but about the man who gave his name to this beautiful shrub.

William Forsyth was gardener to the King at Kensington and St. James in 1784 and about 20 years thereafter. Most of the men whose names are perpetuated in our garden plants have been gentlemen and scholars. Forsyth was an unmitigated scoundrel, and a clever one, too, for he swindled the government out of £1,500 in one of the nearest "con" games of his century.

OAKS INFECTED

Now, in his time, England was at war with Napoleon, and one of the most essential munitions of war was oak for ship building. To the dismay of the Lords of the Admiralty, a survey showed many of the trees in the Crown forests to be suffering from canker and internal rot. This situation came to the ears of our friend, and he promptly wrote to "their lordships" offering a solution.

He told them he had "discovered" a method of curing defects in trees, and that he could "restore oak trees where nothing remained but the bark, whereby such trees were rendered fit for the navy as though they had never been injured." He claimed his preparation would cause a rotten tree to restore itself internally, filling up its cavities from within.

SHOWED TREES

The government, ready to clutch at any straw, appointed a committee of 12 members, drawn from both Houses, to investigate Forsyth's claims. He showed them strong, healthy trees which he claimed had been rotting hulks only two years previously, and had bamboozled them so successfully that they reported: "From what we saw and heard, we have reason to believe that Mr. Forsyth's Composition is a Discovery which will be highly beneficial both to individuals and to the Crown."

Forsyth's first asking price for his precious secret was £5,000, but the treasury chiselled him down to £1,500 and paid him, instructing him to publish his discovery in the London Gazette. Here it is—£1,500 worth!

"Take one bushel of fresh cow dung, half a bushel of lime rubbish of old buildings (that from the ceilings of rooms is to be preferred), half a bushel of wood ash, and a sixteenth part of a bushel of pit or river sand; the last three articles are to be sifted fine before they are mixed then work them well together with a spade, and afterwards with a wooden beater, until the material is very smooth, like fine plaster used for ceilings of rooms."

LAY IT ON

The directions for use were to trim the wound and then "lay on the Plaster about one-eighth of an inch thick, all over the part where the wood or bark has been so cut away."

Always the artist, Forsyth followed up these instructions a few weeks later with an improvement:

"As the best way of using Forsyth's Plaster is found, by experience, to be in a liquid state; it must, therefore, be reduced to the consistency of pretty thick paint, by mixing it with a sufficient quantity of urine and soapuds, and laid on with a painter's brush."

ANGRY ANSWER

As you can well imagine, the dignified and erudite fellows of the Royal Horticultural Society really blew their tops when this nonsense was published, and their president, Thomas A. Knight, published a pamphlet in which he called Forsyth a liar and a cheat. The controversy raged for three years, at one time very nearly resulting in a duel between Knight and Forsyth. Knight finally offered 100 guineas for a transverse section of a tree in which the internal wood had been repaired through the use of "Forsyth's Plaster."

No one ever collected.

BY WILLIAM G. BOGART

The homicide captain's office was located in the huge stone building that was City Hall. The room was as neat and efficient looking as Steve Holden himself.

Henkel had helped himself to a cigar from the desk humidor and now sat sprawled in a leather armchair. He watched Brannon with a half twisted smile.

Mark had not said another word since viewing Roberta's body. His eyes were bleak and grim, his mouth a thin, tight line.

"Well?" Captain Holden said finally, from where he was seated behind his desk.

"I don't know," said Brannon slowly. "I honestly don't know."

"You have no idea who might have killed her?"

Mark shook his head. "Where did you find her?"

"In the Ohio River, not far below the suspension bridge to Kentucky. We thought, first maybe she'd jumped off there and —

"Don't be silly!" Brannon cut in.

"— her body started to drift downstream," Holden went on as though not interrupted. "The crew of a river steamer spotted the body as they neared the wharf last night."

"Did you find anything else?"

"No Captain Holden continued quietly as if he were putting a report on a dictaphone. "We searched the pedestrian walk across the bridge. That was after we discovered she had been strangled—before she drowned."

"Strangled?"

"We figure now she might have been thrown from the bridge. Easy enough from a car. A driver could stop there on the spur of the moment, walk across the bridge. That was after we discovered she had been strangled—before she drowned."

Queen Mother Captures, Captivated by New York

Queen Mother Elizabeth of Great Britain addresses guests at a Charter Day dinner of Columbia University in New York City. Resplendent in royal attire, the Queen Mother read a message from her daughter, Queen Elizabeth II, congratulating the university on its "remarkable record." Like all visitors to New York City, the Queen Mother wished to see all the sights and, below, she exhibited varying expressions as she toured the city.

Neuberger Elected by Narrow Margin

Democrats Take Over Senate With Hairline Oregon Victory

WASHINGTON (CP)—A hairline victory by Democrat Richard Neuberger over Senator Guy Cordon, decided more than 24 hours after the polls closed, apparently gave the Democrats control of the Senate in Tuesday's election.

Recounts may affect the result both in Oregon and in New Jersey, where Republican Clifford Case had a slim margin over Democrat Charles Howell, but the Democrats had a 48-to-47 edge pending the result of the recounts. The remaining Senate seat is held by another Oregon senator, Independent Wayne Morse, who pledged his vote to the Democrats.

The Democrats already have won control of the House of Representatives by a 29-seat margin despite President Eisenhower's pre-election promises of apathy, probably is due to the fact that President Eisenhower stepped so decisively into the campaign in the last week.

Both the New Jersey and Oregon races were tight right up to the finish.

Case, who had battled the right wing of his party almost as much as his Democratic opponents during a hectic campaign, was a bare 2,000 votes ahead when all the votes were counted. Pending the results of a recount, his seat was safe in the Republican column.

In Oregon it was a different story. Democrat Richard Neuberger, an author whose articles on northwestern Canada have been published widely throughout the United States, finished strongly and took a narrow lead of barely 1,000 votes with only a few precincts left to report.

If Neuberger's lead holds up, the Democrats will rule the Senate by a one-vote margin. If he loses, it may be weeks before recounts in Oregon and New Jersey determine the final result.

Ironically the New Jersey Republican candidate, Clifford Case, is the only party candidate scorned by the obsequious Wisconsin Republican, Senator Joe McCarthy.

Now his chairmanship of the Senate Communist-hunting gains and named former Illinois Adlai Stevenson as his choice for Democratic presidential candidate in 1956.

At Libertyville, Ill., Stevenson, who lost the presidential race to Eisenhower in 1952, was cautious in his comment.

"I am grateful to former president Truman," he said, "but I have no present plans for future political activity."

'Too Precious To Be Taken for Granted'

Queen Mother Stresses Value Of Firm Bond Linking U.S.-U.K.

Tolerance, Patience Theme of Address

NEW YORK (CP)—Queen Mother Elizabeth, symbol of British-American friendship, at the close of her visit to New York said Wednesday night the Atlantic, "once a wide gulf between us, is surely now a lake that links us."

An audience of more than 3,000 at a farewell dinner given by the English-Speaking Union—one of the biggest in the history of the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel—heard the Queen Mother caution that the understanding "which I believe to be so necessary between our two countries, is much too precious to be taken for granted."

"For misunderstandings are like weeds; neglect to tend your garden and they spring up everywhere. True understanding by contrast needs constant fostering. It needs tolerance as well as firmness, patience as well as goodwill, common sense as well as good intentions, hard heads as well as warm hearts."

Speaking for the Americans, Earl Warren, chief justice of the United States, said that today the dream of peace in the world has begun to approximate reality, and "one of the compelling reasons why this is so has been the way the British Commonwealth and the United States have moved forward together."

CANADA LINK

The theme of friendship between the two great powers with Canada a significant link between them—was carried through the audience, made up of prominent British, American and Canadian figures plus United Nations delegates.

Bay Lawson, Canadian consul-general in New York, was his country's official representative at the dinner—but seven Canadian pipers of the Black Watch regiment shared the limelight with the Queen Mother before the glittering guests.

The Queen is colonel-in-chief of the regiment, and the pipers, brought from Montreal for the occasion, preceded Her Majesty in a grand tour of the ballrooms before the dinner.

ONLY MAJOR SPEECH

The Queen's speech was the only major one of her three-week tour of New York, Washington and Ottawa. She thanked the English-Speaking Union, an organization dedicated to better understanding between the U.S. and Britain, for the contributions to the King George VI memorial fund by which scholarships are granted to English students for specialized work in the U.S.

The dinner wound up the Queen Mother's visit to New York which began October 26. Today she takes off for Washington to visit the White House as guest of President Eisenhower, and next Friday flies to Canada for a six-day stay in the Ottawa area before returning to New York to sail for home.

The City of New York marked the visit earlier Wednesday with a luncheon tendered by Mayor Robert Wagner. The Queen told the mayor and guests that her stay here was "certainly an inspiring and stimulating experience."

Since New York's administration is Democratic, there were many happily victorious Democratic leaders and supporters at the lunch, and the Queen Mother—chatted briefly with Averell Harriman, governor-elect of New York State.

POLITICS AVOIDED

But like Mayor Wagner, Democratic mayor of the city, Harriman carefully avoided the subject of politics in talking to the Queen Mother.

Chinese To Pay Claim

LONDON (CP)—Red China has agreed to meet Britain's demand for £367,000 in damages for the British airliner shot down by Chinese Communist fighters July 23 near Hainan Island with the loss of 10 lives.

Robert Hugh Turton, parliamentary undersecretary for foreign affairs, told the House of Commons that Peiping has "accepted this claim as covering the entire benefits and compensation for all losses involved."

TACTFULLY DECLINES

Mrs. Hewitt tactfully, but firmly, declined to take a bouquet of carnations and roses she was already carrying as an excuse.

The school teacher said that many Jamaicans who planned to emigrate to Canada have now changed their minds.

Mr. Hewitt, who flew to Jamaica a week ago to rejoin his wife, said he hoped he would be able to resume his teaching career in a Vancouver public school. He said he has filed his qualifications with both the public school board here and the B.C. Teachers' Federation.

Mr. Hewitt said the school had paid his fare to Jamaica although he had advised the headmaster, G. Peter Kaye, there was little likelihood he or his wife would sign a statement prepared by the headmaster which read in part:

VANCOUVER (CP)—John Hewitt brought his pretty Jamaican bride back to British Columbia Wednesday night vowing to forget about color bars and make a fresh start.

The couple, who arrived here by air from Toronto, said under no circumstances would they return to the exclusive Shawigan Lake School where the bride was turned away because of her color.

"We feel a new start is definitely in order," the 34-year-old, English-born science teacher told newspaper reporters at a press interview held immediately after the couple's arrival. He added that his wife, Dorothy, would not have considered returning to Canada with him had he contemplated returning to the school.

"We feel we've come home," he added.

Mrs. Hewitt, who left the school and returned alone to her home only four days after her marriage, looked like a bride on her honeymoon as she stepped from a Trans-Canada Airlines plane carrying a huge bouquet of flowers and wearing a chic, form-fitting grey tweed suit.

More than a score of newspaper reporters, radio men and photographers met the Hewitts as they left the plane. Also on hand were a few personal friends and a group of about 15 men and women who identified themselves as members of the left-wing League for Democratic Rights.

Gang Victim Shot

VANCOUVER (CP)—The shooting of William Semenick in heavily timbered Stanley Park during the early morning, was the second attempt on the ex-convict's life, police said Wednesday night.

Semenick, with a bullet wound in the left groin, was in good condition under guard in hospital here but police said the fact he suffered with a heart condition created a "potentially dangerous" situation.

GANG RIVALRY

It was the second gangland-style shooting in Vancouver within two months. Last September Danny Brent, head waiter at a liquor club here, was slain after being driven to a suburban golf course.

Brent and Semenick were reported to have been good friends.

The chance arrival of a police officer, who mistook the rapid-fire drumming of an automatic for children shooting off firecrackers, was credited with saving Semenick's life Wednesday.

Const. Bill Lindsay was on a routine patrol of the 1,000-acre park in a one-man police jeep when he heard the sound of the explosions and Semenick staggered toward him.

"Help me, I'm shot," Lindsay quoted the injured man.

At the same time, a nearby car sped away and another man raced into the bushes afoot.

A 26-year-old man, found hiding in the waters of Burrard Inlet, immersed up to his neck, was taken into custody. He was seen by a caretaker as he lowered himself into the water behind a cabin cruiser. A second man was arrested later in the day, but no charges were laid.

Semenick worked at different times as a roof shingler in Toronto, Winnipeg, Victoria and Vancouver.

Convicted In Whisky Slaying

VANCOUVER (CP)—Peter Vauchel, 27-year-old unemployed logger charged with murder, was convicted Wednesday on a reduced charge of manslaughter in the butcher-knife slaying of German immigrant Karl Horwald.

The knifing took place in Vauchel's room after a drinking party in a downtown club. A dispute over ownership of a bottle of whisky preceded the fatal fracas.

Fire Rages In Duncan

DUNCAN—A fire which swept through the front section of a bowling alley in mid-town early today was still being battled by firemen at press time.

The blaze was reported shortly after midnight by Sam Bolig who had just returned from Victoria. At that time flames were gushing from the building.

Fine Old Titles Go on Auction Block

LONDON (Reuters)—A batch of 27 fine old titles went on the auction block Wednesday, and England managed to hang on to all but one of them.

An expected buying spree by title-hungry Americans failed to materialize. Apparently they were discouraged by the news that they could not export the musty documents proving them to be lords of the manors.

After the last title was auctioned off in the glare of newsreel and television lights, the 27 successful bidders had paid more than $10,000 for the right to put on their calling cards such monikers as "John Doe, lord of the manor of Circum Cum Wilcocks alias Fransham Parva in the parish of Little Fransham." That item sold for $925.

One Chicago woman, Mrs. Verne E. Oleck, sent the auctioneer a cheque for $100 as a deposit on one of the titles. But she mistakenly believed that a manor house was included with the title.

Before the bidding began Wednesday, the auctioneer announced that none of the documents—some of them 700 years old—could be taken out of England.

One title was bought for an Australian couple, Maj. Gordon Dunstan and his wife. The major now is lord of the manor of Beaumonts in Lindsey, which belonged to the Beaumont family in 1291.
